

A top-down photograph of a white ceramic cup filled with a deep red liquid, likely tea. A single, dried maple leaf with warm orange and yellow tones rests on the rim of the cup. The cup sits on a light brown, hexagonal cork coaster. The entire scene is set against a rich, brown, heavily textured background that resembles a knitted sweater or a coarse rug. In the lower right corner, another maple leaf is partially visible, showing more vibrant autumn colors. The lighting is soft and directional, creating gentle shadows and highlighting the textures of the cup, leaves, and background.
